POSTKARTE.

The Magpie (Pica rustica). This is a graceful bird, whose plumage from a distance appears to be black and white, but on closer inspection and in certain lights the long tail will be seen to be of a beautiful iridescent green. The Magpie has an easy but slow flight, and its cry is a noisy chatter. The nest is large and shaped somewhat like a sphere, and consists of twigs of the blackthorn held together by grass and lined with the same. The eggs are from six to nine in number, and of a mottled brownish colour.
